SICILY TO ROME 1943-44

At the Casablanca Conference in January 1943, Allied leaders decided to follow successes in North Africa by invading Sicily; success in Sicily led to landings in Italy. Allied objectives were to clear the Mediterranean Sea, force Italy out of the war, divert German forces threatening Russia, and weaken the Germans prior to the 1944 Cross-Channel invasion. Major milestones in the campaigns include:

JULY 10, 1943 – Allied forces landed on Sicily's southeastern corner.

AUGUST 17 – Sicily was liberated, German and Italian forces driven out.

SEPTEMBER 3 – Italian government signed armistice.

SEPTEMBER 9 – Allied forces landed at Salerno; Germans seized control of Italy and fought back.

OCTOBER 1 – American Fifth Army liberated Naples; British Eighth Army captured vital airfields near Foggia.

OCTOBER-DECEMBER – Allied forces fought slowly northward up the Italian peninsula against fierce resistance, and were halted at the defenses of the Gustav Line.

JANUARY 22, 1944 – Allied forces outflanked German positions with surprise landings at Anzio and Nettuno.

FEBRUARY 3-20–German forces launched a series of counterattacks at Anzio. Allied ground, air and naval forces successfully defended the beachhead.

MARCH-MAY–Stalemate at Anzio.

MAY 23-25–Allied forces broke through the Gustav Line and out from the Anzio beachhead.

JUNE 4–Rome liberated by Allied forces.

The South Garden

Seasonal flowers aligned with crepe myrtle trees appear on both sides. At the far end is a bronze statue of the Greek god of music, Orpheus.

The Memorial

The memorial consists of a chapel, map room, and connecting peristyle constructed of Roman travertine.

The Chapel

The names of 3,095 missing are memorialized on the interior walls of the chapel. A bronze rosette indicates the names of those recovered, identified and buried.

The North Garden

Four stars are centered with seasonal flowers around them. The outer side is a rectangular strip with blooming roses. Italian umbrella pines flank a granite fountain.

Brothers-in-Arms

The bronze "Brothers-in-Arms" statue by Paul Manship symbolizes the partnership between the U.S. Army and Navy.

The Burial Area

A center mall flanked by paths from the pool area to the memorial divides the 10 burial plots. The headstones are of Lasa marble.

Stone Cenotaph

On a small island in the center of a pool near the cemetery entrance is a stone cenotaph of Roman travertine honoring the war dead.

Layout

On your journey from the visitor center west to the ornamental pool and up the mall paths through the burial area, you will reach the memorial, the chapel, Brothers in Arms statue, and the north and south gardens.
